

Coaching Agreement

Important: please note you cannot attend coaching with Danielle Dowling without reviewing and agreeing to the following terms at conditions. Please review, notate at the end of the agreement and send back to me. Thank you in advance!

This agreement is between Danielle Dowling. (The coach) and your name (the coachee) for the purposes of outlining the terms and conditions for coaching with Danielle Dowling.

All sessions are non-refundable and expire after 6 months.

I. Indemnity:

By taking on the coach, the coachee is representing herself as a competent, effective individual who is fully able to make her own personal and business decisions and choices, including decisions and choices the coachee may make as a result of this coaching process. The coachee represents herself or her company as being able to operate fully, freely, and responsibly for all of the coachee's personal and business decisions and actions.

The Coachee waives all claims of any type whatsoever that The Coachee may have against The Coach arising out of or in connection with any claims or lawsuits against The Coachee or liabilities or damages of any sort incurred by The Coachee related to any actions The Coachee takes or decisions The Coachee makes as a result of The Coach's input, coaching, speaking, training, or development.

II. Copyright and Ownership:

The Coachee understands that all material presented in the coaching process are copyrighted or licensed by The Coach. The Coachee promises that any notes The Coachee takes will be for the The Coachee's personal and professional use only. The Coachee will not resell any of the coaching distinctions and material without the prior written consent of The Coach. Furthermore, The Coachee will not attempt to coach other individuals by using the principles and methodologies employed in the coaching relationship without the prior written consent of The Coach.

First Name

Last Name

Email

I agree

I disagree